1 MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

2 I.

3 INTRODUCTION

4 On August 16 and 17, 2007, outside counsel for Control 5 Components, Inc. ("CCI," or "the Company") interviewed several of 6 the Company's senior executives, including defendants Hong "Rose" 7 Carson, Paul Cosgrove, and David Edmonds ("defendants"), as part 8 of the Company's internal investigation into whether corrupt 9 payments had been made by the Company and its employees to secure 10 or retain business. One day earlier, CCI had, through counsel, 11 voluntarily disclosed its internal investigation and the 12 underlying concerns to the United States Department of Justice 13 ("the government"). Defendants now ask this Court to suppress 14 statements they made during the interviews, arguing that their 15 participation in the interviews was coerced in violation of their 16 Fifth Amendment rights against self-incrimination. Defendants' 17 Notice of Motion and Motion to Suppress Defendants' Statements
18 (Dkt. #573) ("Defts' Suppression Motion"). Defendants contend 19 that the Company was a state actor at the time of the interviews 20 by virtue of its voluntary disclosure and contemplated 21 cooperation with the government and that their statements were 22 improperly coerced by threats of termination.

23 Defendants' motion to suppress should be denied. Only state 24 actors can violate a defendant's Fifth Amendment rights, and the 25 evidence shows that the Company's actions were not the result of 26 any pressure or influence from the government sufficient to 27 convert the Company's lawyers to state actors. Nor can 28 defendants show that their statements were involuntary, as the

1 evidence does not show that defendants were threatened with 2 termination.

3 II.

4 BACKGROUND

5 A. The Government's Principles of Corporate Prosecution

6 The Justice Department has long had a written policy
7 governing its treatment of corporate wrongdoing. Since the late 8 1990s, that policy has been memorialized in a series of memoranda 9 written by the Deputy Attorney General, one of the highest-10 ranking officials in the Department. In 2006, then-Deputy 11 Attorney General Paul J. McNulty wrote a memorandum ("the McNulty 12 Memorandum") to all federal prosecutors in which he updated the 13 government's "Principles of Federal Prosecution of Business 14 Organizations." Declaration of Douglas F. McCormick attached
15 hereto ("McCormick Decl."), Exh. A.<sup>1</sup> Under the McNulty 16 Memorandum, federal prosecutors were instructed that they must 17 consider "the corporation's timely and voluntary disclosure of 18 wrongdoing and its willingness to cooperate in the investigation 19 of its agents." Id. at 4. The memorandum elaborates as follows:

20 In determining whether to charge a 21 corporation, that corporation's timely and 22 voluntary disclosure of wrongdoing and its 23 cooperation with the government's 24 investigation may be relevant factors. In 25 gauging the extent of the corporation's 26 cooperation, the prosecutor may consider, among other things, whether the corporation made a voluntary and timely disclosure, and the corporation's willingness to provide relevant evidence and to identify the culprits within the corporation, including

27 <sup>1</sup> Earlier versions of the McNulty Memorandum are sometimes 28 called the "Holder Memorandum" or the "Thompson Memorandum," after the Deputy Attorneys General who authored them.

1 senior executives.

2 Id. at 7.

3 The McNulty Memorandum departed from earlier versions in its 4 discussion of how the government should consider a corporation's 5 advancement of attorney's fees:

6 Another factor to be weighed by the 7 prosecutor is whether the corporation appears 8 to be protecting its culpable employees and 9 agents. Thus, while cases will differ 10 depending on the circumstances, a 11 corporation's promise of support to culpable 12 employees and agents, e.g., through retaining 13 the employees without sanction for their 14 misconduct or through providing information 15 to the employees about the government's 16 investigation pursuant to a joint defense 17 agreement, may be considered by the 18 prosecutor in weighing the extent and value 19 of a corporation's cooperation.

20 Prosecutors generally should not take into 21 account whether a corporation is advancing 22 attorneys' fees to employees or agents under 23 investigation and indictment. Many state 24 indemnification statutes grant corporations 25 the power to advance the legal fees of 26 officers under investigation prior to a 27 formal determination of guilt. As a 28 consequence, many corporations enter into contractual obligations to advance attorneys' fees through provisions contained in their corporate charters, bylaws or employment agreements. Therefore, a corporation's compliance with governing state law and its contractual obligations cannot be considered a failure to cooperate. This prohibition is not meant to prevent a prosecutor from asking questions about an attorney's representation of a corporation or its employees.

24 Id. at 11-12 (emphasis added). The change reflected the 25 Department's response to judicial criticism of the Department's 26 earlier position that potentially penalized corporations that 27 elected to pay the attorney's fees of employees under 28 investigation. See, e.g., United States v. Stein, 435 F. Supp.

1 2d 330, 362-65 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) ("Stein I").

2 B. The Company's Voluntary Disclosure

3 CCI is a wholly-owned subsidiary of IMI plc, an English
4 company publicly traded on the London Stock Exchange. On August 5 15, 2007, IMI's management informed its Board of Directors of 6 possible improper payments made by CCI. See United States v.
7 Control Components, Inc., Case No. SA CR 09-00162-JVS, Dkt. #11
8 at 5.<sup>2</sup> IMI's Board of Directors directed a voluntary disclosure 9 of the investigation to the United States Department of Justice 10 as well as authorities in the United Kingdom. Id. That same 11 date, IMI made a voluntary disclosure in which it advised the 12 government of possible FCPA violations by CCI and its employees.
13 See Declaration of Brian M. Heberlig in Support of Motion to 14 Intervene by IMI plc and Control Components, Inc. (Dkt. #104) at 15 2. (The government has submitted in camera the notes of Mark F.
16 Mendelsohn, then-Deputy Chief of the Department of Justice's 17 Fraud Section, reflecting his summary of IMI's voluntary 18 disclosure.)

19 C. August 15-17, 2007: E-mails Between the Company and the 20 Government

21 Shortly after the Company made its voluntary disclosure, one 22 of its lawyers, Steptoe & Johnson LLP ("Steptoe") partner Patrick 23 M. Norton ("Mr. Norton"), wrote the following e-mail to the 24 aforementioned Mr. Mendelsohn:<sup>3</sup>

25 _____

26 <sup>2</sup> All page references to docketed filings are to the ECF 27 page number at the top of the page, i.e. "Page __ of __."

28 <sup>3</sup> At the time Mr. Mendelsohn oversaw all of the government's FCPA cases; he left the government in 2010.

1 Mark,

2 I've been discussing with IMI's general 3 counsel the feasibility of holding off on 4 their announcement to the London Exchange. He 5 doesn't think it's doable. The Company's 6 Board of Directors, on advice from UK
7 counsel, decided at about 6 PM UK time to 8 issue the release at 7:30 AM in London
9 tomorrow. It's already 9:30 PM in the UK 10 (about 8:30 - 9 when we spoke), and the 11 wheels are in motion. It's simply not 12 feasible to get UK counsel to opine on this 13 and contact all the Board members in time to 14 derail the announcement. There would also be 15 a significant risk of a leak if they tried to 16 do this at the last moment, and that would 17 create other problems.

18 We fully recognize your and our interest in 19 getting access to senior management who may 20 have been involved in the payments in 21 questions while may still be willing to 22 cooperate. To that end, I am now planning to 23 fly to LA this evening or first thing in the 24 morning and to be present when the 25 individuals are informed that they are being 26 suspended pending the investigation. We 27 intend to inform them that the suspension is 28 temporary and we are not prejudging the outcome, but that the company expects them to cooperate with the investigation. Then I proceed to interview them.

This will give our associate in LA time to assemble many, if not all, of the relevant documents.

I would hope to be able to advise you by the end of the day tomorrow (probably COB PDT) whether the individuals are cooperating or not. If they are, you can then decide whether you wish to send someone from the DOJ or FBI to speak to them. I will also be on-site to help coordinate with the company.
If they refuse to cooperate with us, they will presumably refuse to cooperate with you too. In either case, you should have a better idea of what course you wish to take.

If you want to discuss, I expect to be in the office until about 6:15. . . .

Regards,
Pat

1 McCormick Decl., Exh. B at 2.<sup>4</sup>

2 Mr. Norton sent Mr. Mendelsohn a second e-mail at 1:22 a.m.
3 on Friday, August 17, 2007, in which he updated Mr. Mendelsohn on 4 the first day of interviews:

5 Mark,

6 We interviewed five of the senior management 7 at CCI today in very general terms. So far 8 they are being cooperative. We intend to ask 9 more difficult questions tomorrow based on 10 specific documents.

11 If you would like to discuss this, please 12 suggest a time by email, and I[']ll try to 13 break away.

14 Best regards,
15 Pat

16 Id. at 2-3. Mr. Mendelsohn responded several hours later:

17 Thanks, Pat. I will be out of the office on 18 Friday [August 17, 2007]. I suggest we speak 19 early next week, after you have gotten into 20 specifics.

21 Id. at 3.

22 D. The Company's Interviews

23 As reflected in the e-mails between Mr. Norton and Mr.
24 Mendelsohn, Mr. Norton and other Steptoe attorneys conducted 25 interviews of company employees at CCI's corporate headquarters 26 in Rancho Santa Margarita, California, on August 16 and 17, 2007.
27 No FBI agents were present. Declaration of Special Agent Brian 28 J. Smith attached hereto ("Smith Decl."), ¶¶ 2-4. Steptoe attorneys instructed the witnesses that the interviews were <sup>4</sup> This e-mail is time-stamped at 4:49 p.m. Eastern Time. It reflects that Messrs. Mendelsohn and Norton had a conversation about one hour earlier, at approximately 3:30 or 4:00 p.m.

1 confidential and protected by the attorney-client privilege.
2 Declaration of Brian Heberlig (Dkt. #121-2) at 4. Steptoe
3 attorneys also gave so-called Upjohn warnings<sup>5</sup> to each witness 4 indicating that the contents of the interview were privileged,
5 but that the privilege and the decision whether to waive it 6 belonged to IMI, not the employee. Id. Steptoe attorneys also 7 told the witnesses that they represented IMI, not the witness 8 personally. Id.

9 On August 16, 2007, CCI's then-President, Ian Whiting, held 10 an all-personnel meeting at which he informed personnel of the 11 investigation and the interviews. Both Mr. Edmonds and Mrs.
12 Carson describe being present at this meeting. Mr. Edmonds says 13 that "Whiting announced that IMI had launched an investigation 14 into possible irregular payments and he ordered that every 15 employee must fully cooperate with the investigation and meet as 16 required with investigators." Declaration of David Edmonds in 17 Support of Defendants' Motion to Suppress Defendants' Statements 18 (Dkt. #573-3) ("Edmonds Decl."), ¶ 2.<sup>6</sup>

19 Whiting subsequently met with Mr. Edmonds, Mr. Cosgrove, and 20 Mrs. Carson individually. Mr. Edmonds's declaration states that 21 Mr. Whiting told Mr. Edmonds that "he [Whiting] expected my full 22 cooperation with the investigation." Edmonds Decl., ¶ 3. Mr.
23 Cosgrove states that Mr. Whiting "directed me to cooperate in 24

25 <sup>5</sup> Upjohn Co. v. United States, 449 U.S. 383 (1981).

26 <sup>6</sup> Mrs. Carson claims that because of Mr. Whiting's British 27 accent and the vocabulary he used, she did not understand "the 28 specifics of the scope of the investigation." Declaration of Hong Jiang Carson ("Carson Decl."), ¶ 2.

1 CCI's internal investigation and submit to an interview with 2 Steptoe." Declaration of Paul Cosgrove (Dkt. #573-4) ("Cosgrove 3 Decl."), ¶ 2.

4 At no time did Mr. Whiting or anyone else at IMI or CCI 5 threaten to fire Mr. Edmonds, Mr. Cosgrove, or Mrs. Carson if 6 they did not cooperate with the investigation. Mr. Edmonds's own 7 declaration makes this clear: "Because I was ordered by the 8 President of CCI [Whiting] to cooperate with the investigation 9 and meet as required with investigators, I believed that if I did 10 not do what I was told and cooperate and meet with investigators, 11 I would be fired." Edmonds Decl., ¶ 4 (emphasis added).
12 Likewise, Mr. Cosgrove states that "I believed that if I did not 13 agree to submit to an interview, I could lose my job for 14 disobeying an order from CCI's President." Cosgrove Decl., ¶ 2 15 (emphasis added).

16 Mr. Cosgrove states that there were "two gentlemen" he did 17 not recognize at CCI on August 17, 2007, and that he was "later 18 told" that they "were in fact FBI agents." Cosgrove Decl., ¶ 4.
19 Mr. Cosgrove's information is incorrect; no FBI agents were at 20 CCI on August 17, 2007, and, in fact, the FBI's investigation of 21 CCI's activities was not even opened until two months later. See 22 Smith Decl., ¶¶ 2-4.

23 After describing Mr. Whiting's initial announcement, Mrs.
24 Carson says she was asked to come out of the restroom on the 25 morning of August 17, 2007. Carson Decl., ¶ 2.<sup>7</sup> Mrs. Carson

27 <sup>7</sup> The indictment alleges that Mrs. Carson was destroying 28 documents related to the internal investigation "by, among other things, taking such documents to the CCI ladies' room, tearing up

1 describes being asked to go to a conference room where she was 2 subsequently asked to remain. Mrs. Carson says she "felt there 3 would be serious repercussions to [her] employment, including the 4 possibility of immediate termination, if I did not comply with 5 her instructions to stay in the conference room." Carson Decl., 6 ¶ 3. Mrs. Carson then describes being escorted to a second 7 conference room, where she was interviewed by Steptoe lawyers.
8 Id., ¶¶ 4-5. Mrs. Carson says she "do[es] not remember being 9 told that I was going to be meeting with lawyers for the company 10 before being taken to this conference room." Id., ¶ 4. Mrs.
11 Carson states that "at all times during the events described 12 above, including meeting with the lawyers, I felt that I could 13 not leave the company and that if I did not comply with the 14 various requests, I would be fired or suffer negative 15 consequences regarding my CCI [sic]." Id., ¶ 7.

16 Mr. Whiting's statements to defendants were documented in an 17 identical memorandum he wrote to each of them on August 17, 2007.
18 McCormick Decl., Exhs. C1-C3 ("Whiting Memorandum"). The Whiting
19 Memorandum stated, in pertinent part:

20 I write to confirm the conversation we had 21 today. As you and I discussed, IMI has 22 launched an investigation into possible 23 irregular payments associated with certain 24 trading contracts entered into by its Severe 25 Service business. The Company is committed 26 to the highest ethical standards and takes 27 these matters very seriously. We have 28 retained external counsel and other consultants to conduct a thorough, independent investigation.

As someone involved in the Severe Service

the documents, and flushing them down a toilet." Trial Indictment at 27.

1 business, the Company expects you to 2 cooperate fully in this process.
3 Arrangements have been made for you to meet
4 with the investigators. When you do so, 5 please answer all their questions and furnish 6 all information they request. Should the 7 investigators contact you later for further 8 discussions or additional information, please 9 comply promptly. We remind you that you must 10 keep all your discussions with the 11 investigators in the strictest confidence.
12 You should disclose them to no one, inside or 13 outside the Company, without advance
14 permission from Ian Whiting.

15 This also confirms that you are being 16 suspended, with pay, during the investigation 17 process. Again, we emphasize that this is 18 not a termination of your employment. Nor is 19 it a determination that you have made 20 irregular payments or otherwise behaved 21 unethically. Should there be indications of 22 misconduct, you will be afforded an 23 opportunity to give your side of the story
24 during this phase of the investigation. You 25 will be asked to report back to work once a 26 determination is made that you have not 27 engaged in misconduct. In the event you are 28 found to have engaged in misconduct, you will be subject to disciplinary action, up to and including termination of employment.

Id. (emphases added). The government is aware of no evidence that suggests that defendants have claimed, at least prior to this motion to suppress, that the Whiting Memoranda's description of Mr. Whiting's interactions with defendants is inaccurate.

III.

ARGUMENT

The Fifth Amendment provides that "[n]o person . . . shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself." U.S. Const. amend V. For Fifth Amendment protections to apply in the context of a corporate internal investigation, two elements must be satisfied:

First, only "state actors" can violate a defendant's Fifth

1 Amendment rights; the Fifth Amendment restricts only governmental 2 conduct, and will constrain a private entity only insofar as its 3 actions are found to be "fairly attributable" to the government.
4 See Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., 457 U.S. 922, 937 (1982); D.L.
5 Cromwell Investments, Inc. v. NASD Regulation, Inc., 279 F.3d
6 155, 161 (2d Cir. 2002).

7 Second, the statements taken must be compelled. See Fisher 8 v. United States, 425 U.S. 391, 399 (1976) ("[T]he Court has 9 never on any ground . . . applied the Fifth Amendment to prevent 10 the otherwise proper acquisition or use of evidence which . . .
11 did not involve compelled testimonial self-incrimination of some 12 sort.") (emphasis added); see also id. at 408 ("[T]he Fifth 13 Amendment does not independently proscribe the compelled 14 production of every sort of incriminating evidence but applies 15 only when the accused is compelled to make a Testimonial 16 Communication that is incriminating.").

17 A. Neither the Company Nor Its Lawyers Were State Actors at the 18 Time of Defendants' Interviews

19 Defendants cite two different lines of cases for determining 20 that CCI and Steptoe were state actors when they conducted 21 interviews of defendants as part of their internal investigation.
22 Deft's Suppression Motion at 17-18, 20-21. As part of the first, 23 defendants cite Ninth Circuit cases -- e.g., United States v.
24 Reed, 15 F.3d 928 (9th Cir. 1994), United States v. Miller, 688
25 F.2d 652 (9th Cir. 1982), and United States v. Walther, 652 F.2d 26 788 (9th Cir. 1981) -- involving the application of Fourth 27 Amendment principles to private party searches. Defts' 28 Suppression Motion at 17-18. Those cases stand for the

1 proposition that "the government cannot knowingly acquiesce in 2 and encourage directly or indirectly a private citizen to engage 3 in activity which it is prohibited from pursuing where that 4 citizen has no motivation other than the expectation of reward 5 for his or her efforts." Walther, 652 F.2d at 793.

6 While defendants correctly cite United States v. Day, 591 7 F.3d 679, 683 (4th Cir. 2010), for the proposition that 8 "regardless of whether the Fourth or Fifth Amendment is at issue, 9 we apply the same test to determine whether a private individual 10 acted as a Government agent," Deft's Suppression Motion at 17 n.
11 6, the cases analyzing whether a private entity's conduct should 12 be considered "state action" for purposes of the Fifth Amendment 13 have engaged in a different analysis. See, e.g., United States 14 v. Stein, 541 F.3d 130, 146-47 (2d Cir. 2008); United States v.
15 Ferguson, 2007 WL 4240782 (D. Conn. Nov. 30, 2007). Those cases 16 have looked to whether the government has become so pervasively 17 entangled in private activity that purportedly private conduct 18 should be attributed to the state or the government has 19 encouraged or facilitated the challenged activity.

20 Under this line of cases, actions of a private entity are 21 attributable to the State if "there is a sufficiently close nexus 22 between the State and the challenged action of the . . . entity 23 so that the action of the latter may be fairly treated as that of 24 the State itself." Jackson v. Metropolitan Edison Co., 419 U.S.
25 345, 351 (1974); accord Defts' Suppression Motion at 20 (noting 26 that this line of cases is a "second distinct doctrinal basis" 27 for finding state action). This close nexus requirement is not 28 satisfied by evidence that the government merely approves of or

1 acquiesces in the initiatives of the private entity. San 2 Francisco Arts & Athletics, Inc. v. U.S. Olympic Comm., 483 U.S.
3 522, 547 (1987). "The purpose of the [close-nexus requirement] 4 is to assure that constitutional standards are invoked only when 5 it can be said that the State is responsible for the specific 6 conduct of which the plaintiff complains." Blum v. Yaretsky, 457
7 U.S. 991, 1004 (1982). Such responsibility is normally found 8 when the State "has exercised coercive power or has provided such 9 significant encouragement, either overt or covert, that the 10 choice must in law be deemed to be that of the State." Id. "A 11 nexus of state action exists between a private entity and the 12 state when the state exercises coercive power, is entwined in the 13 management or control of the private actor, or provides the 14 private actor with significant encouragement, either overt or 15 covert, or when the private actor operates as a willful 16 participant in joint activity with the State or its agents, is 17 controlled by an agency of the State, has been delegated a public 18 function by the state, or is entwined with governmental 19 policies." Flagg v. Yonkers Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 396 F.3d 178, 187 20 (2d Cir. 2005) (emphases added and internal quotation marks 21 omitted). Furthermore, "the transformation of a private entity 22 into a state actor 'requires a nexus between the state and the 23 specific conduct of which plaintiff complains.'" Ferguson, 2007
24 WL 4240782, at *6 (emphasis in original) (citations omitted)
25 (cooperating company was not a state actor where, unlike Stein 26 II, there were no meetings between prosecutors and the company to 27 determine how best to pressure employees into cooperation and no 28 government-approved threats that hinged the payment of legal fees

1 on cooperation with the government).

2 While the Ninth Circuit has not addressed what test should 3 be applied when determining whether a private entity is a state
4 actor for Fifth Amendment purposes, it has adopted a nexus 5 analysis in other, non-Fourth Amendment contexts. When it 6 affirmed a district court's dismissal of a Religious Freedom 7 Restoration Act ("RFRA") claim, the Ninth Circuit held that 8 plaintiff failed to satisfy the "state action" requirement of the 9 RFRA because governmental compulsion in the form of a generally 10 applicable law, without more, could not transform every private 11 entity that followed the law into a state actor. Sutton v.
12 Providence St. Joseph Med. Ctr., 192 F.3d 826, 841 (9th Cir.
13 1999). Rather, the Court held, the plaintiff must establish some 14 other nexus sufficient to make it fair to attribute liability to 15 the private entity. Id.; see also Carlin Communications, Inc. v.
16 Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 827 F.2d 1291, 1295 (9th Cir.
17 1987) (holding that private telephone company was state actor 18 when it terminated services of another company at direction of 19 county attorney because county attorney threatened to bring 20 charges if it refused).

21 Defendants rely heavily on the district court's conclusion 22 in United States v. Stein, 440 F. Supp. 2d 315 (S.D.N.Y. 2006)
23 ("Stein II"), that the government's conduct coerced defendants 24 into making statements they otherwise would not have made. See 25 Deft's Suppression Motion at 24 ("Just as in Stein II, there was 26 a clear and close nexus between DOJ and the coercion of 27 Defendants, making CCI and Steptoe state actors."). But Stein II 28 is readily distinguishable.

1        Stein II's suppression of defendants' statements followed 2 its decision in Stein I, where it found that the government 3 violated the Sixth Amendment rights of KPMG's employees by 4 pressuring KPMP not to pay employees' legal fees in the context 5 of the government's criminal investigation. 435 F. Supp. 2d at 6 367-69. In Stein I, the district court found that various 7 statements made and actions taken by the government, coupled with 8 the treatment of attorney's fees in the Thompson Memorandum, 9 effectively coerced KPMG to abandon its longstanding practice of 10 indemnifying employees through the advancement of legal defense 11 costs. Id. at 365.<sup>8</sup>

12        When considering whether to suppress defendants' statements, 13 Stein II relied explicitly on the its earlier factual findings:
14 "Here, the government quite deliberately precipitated KPMG's use 15 of economic threats to coerce the proffer statements in 16 question." 440 F. Supp. 2d at 334. Stein II's analysis cited 17 not only the Thompson Memorandum but also the government's 18 threats to consider KPMG's failure to cut off attorney's fees for 19 uncooperative employees as well as the government's practice of 20 reporting uncooperative employees to KPMG "in circumstances in 21 which there was no conceivable reason for doing so except to 22 facilitate the firing threats that ensued." Id. at 335.

23        It is clear from the district court's opinion that the 24 court's holding relied on much more than just the Thompson 25

26        <sup>8</sup> KPMG's willingness to cooperate manifested itself in other 27 ways, too. For instance, its outside counsel told the government 28 it would recommend to employees law firms who understood that cooperation was the best way to proceed, 435 F. Supp. 2d at 345 n.54, a fact the district court called "quite disturbing."

1 Memorandum:

2 The Moving Defendants . . . point to the 3 Thompson Memorandum, which quite specifically 4 tells a company under investigation, as was 5 KPMG, that a failure to ensure that its 6 employees tell prosecutors what they know may 7 contribute to a decision to indict, and, in 8 this case, likely destroy the company. And 9 they point also to the USAO's close 10 involvement in KPMG's decision making process 11 by, among other things, pointedly reminding 12 KPMG that it would consider the Thompson
13 Memorandum in deciding whether to indict, 14 saying that payment of employee legal fees 15 would be viewed "under a microscope," and 16 reporting to KPMG the identities of employees 17 who refused to make statements in 18 circumstances in which the USAO knew full 19 well that KPMG would pressure them to talk to 20 prosecutors. . . .

21 . . . This Court finds that the government, 22 both through the Thompson Memorandum and the 23 actions of the USAO, quite deliberately 24 coerced, and in any case significantly 25 encouraged, KPMG to pressure its employees to 26 surrender their Fifth Amendment rights.

27 Id. at 336-37 (emphasis added).

28 The first critical distinction between Stein II and these circumstances is straightforward. In Stein II, the statements in question were made to the government directly, which made it far easier for the district court in Stein II to conclude there was state action. Here, by comparison, the government was not present when the interviews were conducted, and defendants must persuade the Court that the Company's lawyers were state actors.

But more essentially, there is no evidence here that anyone from the government "deliberately coerced" or "significantly encouraged" anything with respect to the Company's own internal investigation and its interviews of its own employees. The emails between Mr. Norton and Mr. Mendelsohn do not demonstrate

1 either a close nexus between Steptoe/CCI and the government or 2 the kind of governmental coercion or encouragement present in 3 Stein II. This conclusion is underscored in the Whiting
4 Memorandum. To be sure, the Whiting Memorandum confirms that IMI 5 has launched an investigation because "[t]he Company is committed 6 to the highest ethical standards" and IMI takes the matter 7 seriously. McCormick Decl., Exh. C1 at 1. The e-mails confirm 8 that Steptoe/CCI was conducting the investigation and interviews 9 for its own purposes.

10       Shortly after making the voluntary disclosure, Mr. Norton's 11 first e-mail informs the government that (1) IMI was going ahead 12 with a planned press release despite apparent government concerns 13 about its timing; (2) the company would be temporarily suspending 14 certain employees and then interviewing them, without any 15 direction or input from the government over which employees would 16 be interviewed or the appropriateness of the actions; and (3) the 17 company would inform the government the following day whether the 18 suspended employees were cooperating so that "you should have a 19 better idea of what course you wish to take." McCormick Decl., 20 Exh. B at 2. The text of the e-mail itself does not suggest a 21 close nexus. Mr. Norton uses the pronoun "our" to describe CCI's 22 actions and "your" to describe the government's. See id.

23       Mr. Norton then informed the government the following night 24 that he had interviewed five of the senior managers and that 25 Steptoe intended to ask more difficult questions of the employees 26 the following day based on specific documents. Id. Rather than 27 asking the government for approval to conduct the interviews or 28 asking for specific questions or areas of inquiry, Mr. Norton

1 simply indicated that he would be available if the government
2 wanted to discuss the matter further. Id. at 3. Mr. Mendelsohn 3 responded the following morning that he would be out of the 4 office on Friday and suggested they speak early next week, after 5 Steptoe had gotten into specifics. Id.

6 These e-mails show no nexus between the Company and the 7 government. Instead, they show a company in cooperative mode 8 informing the government of what is transpiring in its internal 9 investigation. See, e.g., Ferguson, 2007 WL 4240782, at *5 10 (company's efforts to cooperate with the government do not 11 transform company into an arm of the state). At no time did the 12 government direct the actions of Steptoe/CCI. The government did 13 not instruct the company who to interview or what questions to 14 ask. In fact, the government provided no direction or 15 instruction as to the conduct of the interviews. See, e.g., id.
16 at *6 (cooperating company was not a state actor in absence of 17 "coercive" actions taken by government).

18 Defendants contend (Defts' Suppression Motion at 19) that it 19 is inconsistent for the government to contend that Steptoe/CCI 20 were not state actors at the time of their interviews, because 21 the government once charged Mrs. Carson with a violation of 18 22 U.S.C. § 1519 for conduct (the toilet-flushing incident) that 23 occurred within the same time frame. But § 1519 does not require 24 the existence of a pending investigation, see United States v.
25 Yielding, 657 F.3d 688, 711 (8th Cir. 2011) ("The statute . . .
26 does not allow a defendant to escape liability for shredding 27 documents with intent to obstruct a foreseeable investigation . . .
28 . just because the investigation has not yet commenced."), and

1 numerous cases have concluded that there is no "nexus" 2 requirement that the obstructive conduct be tied to a pending or 3 imminent proceeding or matter, see United States v. Moyer, --- 4 F.3d ---, 2012 WL 639277, at *11 (3rd Cir. Feb. 29, 2011). Thus, 5 the now-dismissed count, which alleged that Mrs. Carson's 6 obstructive conduct occurred "in . . . contemplation of" a 7 federal investigation, does not somehow turn Steptoe/CCI into 8 state actors.

9 Without the type of coercive conduct present in Stein II, 10 defendants are left with only the Company's voluntary disclosure 11 coupled with the McNulty Memorandum's guidance to federal 12 prosecutors to consider a corporation's cooperative efforts.
13 Finding "state action" on these facts alone would be 14 unprecedented and unwarranted, the effect of which would be to 15 turn the cooperating company into a government agent in every 16 case. There is no precedent for such an outcome.

17 B. Defendants' Statements Were Not Involuntary

18 Nor is there any merit to defendants' claim that their 19 statements were coerced. Even by their own version of events, 20 defendants cannot demonstrate that their statements were 21 compelled and were thus involuntary. Defendants' motion to 22 suppress should fail for this separate, independent reason.

23 Defendants' compulsion argument relies principally on 24 Garrity v. New Jersey, 385 U.S. 493 (1967), and its progeny. In 25 Garrity, the New Jersey Attorney General questioned several 26 police officers during an investigation of alleged fixing of 27 traffic tickets. Id. at 494. Before being questioned, each 28 officer was warned that he could invoke his Fifth Amendment

1 privilege against self-incrimination and refuse to answer, but 2 that if he did so, he could be fired pursuant to a state statute
3 that required complete candor of its officers. Id. Prosecutors 4 subsequently used the officers' responses to prosecute them for 5 conspiracy to obstruct the administration of traffic laws. Id.
6 The officers appealed their convictions on the ground that their 7 statements had been coerced. Id. at 495. The Supreme Court held 8 that the test for coercion was "whether the accused was deprived 9 of his free choice to admit, to deny, or to refuse to answer."
10 Id. at 496 (internal quotations marks and citations omitted).
11 The Court analogized the loss of a government job to forfeiture 12 of property protected by the Fourteenth Amendment, and held that 13 the threat of losing one's livelihood could prevent a person from 14 making a free and rational choice to invoke the constitutional 15 right against self-incrimination. Id. at 497 (being faced with 16 the "option to lose their means of livelihood or to pay the 17 penalty of self-incrimination . . . is 'likely to exert such 18 pressure upon an individual as to disable him from making a free 19 and rational choice.'" (citation omitted).

20 It is clear, however, that to constitute compulsion, 21 defendants must demonstrate that they faced a "clear-cut" choice 22 between asserting their right against self-incrimination or 23 suffering economic hardship. See United States v. Ferguson, 2007 24 WL 4240782, at *7 (D. Conn.) (finding defendant's statement was 25 not involuntary where letter from defendant's employer "did not 26 contain overt threats to cooperate at the risk of serious 27 personal consequences; rather, the letter only informed him that 28 (1) [the employer] would consider disciplining employees who

1 failed to cooperate, and (2) [the employer] would reexamine its 2 obligations, under its by-laws, to pay non-cooperating employees' 3 legal fees") (emphasis in original).

4 Although a direct threat of termination may not be 5 necessary, the defendant must have believed the statements to be 6 compelled on threat of loss of job and this belief must have been 7 objectively reasonable. United States v. Vangates, 287 F.3d 8 1315, 1321-22 (11th Cir. 2002); accord Stein II, 440 F. Supp. 2d 9 at 328 ("an individual claiming that a statement was compelled in 10 violation of the Fifth Amendment must adduce evidence both that 11 the individual subjectively believed that he or she had no real 12 choice except to speak and that a reasonable person in that 13 position would have felt the same way"). Thus, "the defendant 14 must have subjectively believed that he was compelled to give a 15 statement upon threat of loss of job [and] this belief must have 16 been objectively reasonable at the time the statement was made."
17 Vangates, 287 F.3d at 1322.

18 Here, there is no evidence to show that defendants had an 19 objectively reasonable belief that they faced a "clear-cut 20 choice" between asserting their rights or suffering economic 21 hardship. Defendants' own declarations do not demonstrate that 22 anyone threatened them with termination if they did not cooperate 23 with the internal investigation. None of the defendants describe 24 being threatened with termination by Mr. Whiting. The Whiting 25 Memorandum is consistent with defendants' own declarations in 26 that it does not overtly threaten defendants' employment. It 27 rather states, "the Company expects you to cooperate fully in 28 [the investigation]," and asks defendants to "please answer all

1 [the investigators'] questions and furnish all information they 2 request." McCormick Decl., Exh. C1 at 1. The only reference to 3 termination in the Whiting Memorandum assures defendants that 4 they are not being terminated and that if indications of 5 misconduct are found, defendants would be allowed to present
6 their side of the story. Id. Nor were defendants threatened 7 with nonpayment of legal fees.<sup>9</sup>

8 Defendants' claims of coercions are thus analogous to the 9 claims rejected by the district court in Ferguson, 2007 WL 10 4240782, where a defendant claimed that his statements were 11 involuntary because "he feared losing his job if he did not 12 cooperate." Id. at *7. Defendant relied on a letter from his 13 employer which informed him that non-cooperation "may result . .
14 . in a reassessment by [the Company] of the factors governing 15 whether it is obligated to indemnify [defendant] for [his] 16 reasonable legal expenses," then noted that such indemnification 17 was condition on the Company's obligations as set forth in its 18 by-laws. Id. at *5. The district court concluded that this 19 letter "did not force [defendant] to choose between asserting his 20 rights and losing his job," and thus rejected defendants' motion 21 to suppress his statements. Id. at *7; see also United States v.
22 Waldon, 363 F.3d 1103 (11th Cir. 2004) (holding that defendant's 23 belief that he would be fired from sheriff's department if he did 24 not testify was not objectively reasonable because department 25

26
27 <sup>9</sup> Defendants cannot claim that the McNulty Memorandum 28 created such a threat: unlike the Thompson Memorandum, the McNulty Memorandum expressly disclaims consideration of the company's payment of attorney's fees.

1 regulations did not require testimony under threat of sanctions 2 but only reflected a general expectation that officers would 3 cooperate and testify).

4 United States v. Saechao, 418 F.3d 1073 (9th Cir. 2005), is 5 inapposite. Saechao involved a probationer whose probation terms 6 compelled him to "truthfully answer all reasonable inquiries" 7 from his probation officer or face revocation. Id. at 1075. On 8 these facts, the Ninth Circuit had little difficulty concluding 9 that "[defendant] did not have the luxury of remaining silent 10 without violating the conditions of his probation." Id. at 1078.
11 Here, by contrast, there has been no showing of employment terms 12 or other provisions that would compel defendants to answer the 13 investigators' questions. All defendants have shown is a request 14 from their supervisor to cooperate with the investigation, and 15 nothing more.

16 Almost forty years ago, the Second Circuit recognized that 17 the rule against involuntary confessions did not preclude 18 scenarios where defendants had to make difficult choices 19 regarding whether to cooperate with an internal investigation: 20 "To be sure, [defendant's] position was not a particularly 21 pleasant one. But the rule excluding involuntary confessions 22 does not protect against hard choices when a person's serious 23 misconduct has placed him in a position where these are 24 inevitable." United States v. Solomon, 509 F.2d 863, 872 (2d 25 Cir. 1975) (Friendly, J.). Over the years, this idea has been 26 reiterated in several different cases rejecting claims of Garrity 27 compulsion. See, e.g., Aquilera v. Baca, 510 F.3d 1161, 1171-73
28 (9th Cir. 2007) (rejecting deputies' Fifth Amendment claim

1 because there was no evidence that deputies were compelled to 2 answer questions; “[i]t is of no moment that refusing to answer 3 the investigators’ questions could have resulted (and, in fact, 4 did result) in [deputies’] reassignment”); United States v.
5 Stein, 233 F.3d 6, 16 (1st Cir. 2000)(finding no Garrity issue
6 where attorney claimed she was compelled to answer questions 7 before state bar; court reasoned that although she faced risk of 8 disbarment, it was not automatic); United States v. Bowers, 739 9 F.2d 1050, 1056 (6th Cir. 1984) (holding Garrity not implicated 10 when employee not told he would lose job if he did not submit to 11 interview).

12 The district court’s conclusions in Stein II are consistent 13 with these cases. The district court concluded that it should 14 suppress statements made by two defendants who were expressly 15 threatened with termination and/or nonpayment of legal fees by 16 KPMG if they refused to cooperate with the government. Id. at 17 331 (“The Court finds that [defendant 1] made the statements at 18 the proffer sessions because KPMG threatened to fire him and cut 19 off payment of his legal fees if he did not [cooperate].”) & 332 20 (“KPMG coerced his appearance [at proffer sessions with the 21 government] by conditioning payment of his legal fees on his 22 appearance and cooperation.”).

23 Because there is no evidence to support an objectively 24 reasonable belief that lack of cooperation with the internal 25 investigators would result in termination, the Court should 26 conclude that defendants’ statements were not compelled. For 27 this reason, defendants’ Fifth Amendment rights were not violated 28 by the Steptoe interviews.

IV.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, defendants' motion to suppress should be denied.

1                                    DECLARATION OF BRIAN J. SMITH

2            I, Brian J. Smith, declare as follows:

3            1.    I am a Special Agent with the Federal Bureau of 4 Investigation ("FBI"). I am currently assigned to the Washington 5 Field Office ("WFO") and focus on investigations of violations of 6 United States law, particularly those involving foreign bribery.
7 I am the lead Special Agent in the case of United States v.
8 Stuart Carson, et al., Case No. SA CR 09-00077-JVS.

9            2.    I have reviewed the FBI's case file for the 10 investigation of corrupt payments at Control Components, Inc.
11 ("CCI"), to determine if there were FBI agents present at CCI on 12 August 16 and/or 17, 2007. The case file reflects that the FBI
13 opened its investigation of CCI and its executives after FBI 14 headquarters received an e-mail summary on or about October 16, 15 2007, from an attorney in the Fraud Section in Washington, DC.
16 The FBI opened its investigation on October 19, 2007; the case 17 file does not reflect any earlier activity. There is nothing in 18 the case file that reflects a lead or other request being made to 19 the Los Angeles Division of the FBI to send Special Agents to CCI 20 in August 2007.

21            3.    I queried the FBI's Automated Case System ("ACS"), a 22 database of the FBI's investigative activity, to see if ACS
23 contained any information about FBI activity at CCI in August 24 2007. My ACS query returned no information indicating that there 25 were FBI Special Agents present at CCI in August 2007. I also 26 spoke to Supervisory Special Agent Johannes Vandehoogen, who 27 supervises a white-collar/corruption squad of agents in the Santa 28 Ana Resident Agency ("SARA"). SSA Vandehoogen reviewed control

1 files at SARA and found no reference to any involvement by FBI
2 agents at CCI in August 2007.

3 4. From my review of the case file and other internal 4 records kept by the FBI, there were no FBI agents at CCI on the 5 dates in question.

6 I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is 7 true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief.

DECLARATION OF DOUGLAS F. McCORMICK

I, Douglas F. McCormick, declare as follows:

1. I am an Assistant United States Attorney in the United States Attorney's Office for the Central District of California. I am one of the attorneys representing the government in this matter.

2. Attached hereto as Exhibit "A" is a copy of an undated memorandum issued in December 2006 by then-Deputy Attorney General Paul J. McNulty regarding "Principles of Federal Prosecution of Business Organizations." This memorandum, often called the McNulty Memorandum for short, was in effect in August 2007 at the time of CCI's voluntary disclosure.

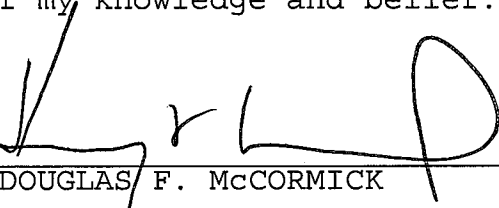

3. Attached hereto as Exhibit "B" is a copy of a letter written by the prosecution team to defendants' counsel in response to Mr. Edmonds's counsel's request for "all documents reflecting communications between the Department of Justice . . . and CCI, IMI, or its agents . . . for the period July 1, 2007, and October 31, 2007." The government's letter confirmed what it had previously told Mr. Edmonds's counsel in person: that it would produce documents reflecting communications between the Department of Justice and CCI's outside counsel, Steptoe & Johnson LLP, for the time period of August 15, 2007, through August 17, 2007. The letter then re-prints the text of three e-mails between Steptoe & Johnson LLP's Patrick Norton and Mark F. Mendelsohn, who at the time was Deputy Chief of the Fraud Section in Washington, DC.

4. Attached as Exhibits C1, C2, and C3, respectively, are true and correct copies of memoranda written on August 17, 2007,

1 by CCI's then-President, Ian Whiting, to defendants Paul 2 Cosgrove, David Edmonds, and Hong Carson, respectively. Each of 3 these copies contains the document control number used in this 4 case to reflect that it has been previously disclosed to 5 defendants' counsel.

6 I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is 7 true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief.
